Public Hearing Open 7:06 PM

Len Tundermann read the legal notice published in the Journal Inquirer.

Marshall Gaston from Fuss & O'Neill presented a map and the overview of the project. He assured the Commission that erosion controls will be in place using hay bales, silt fencing, filter fabric, and dewatering bags. There will be inspections to monitor the project during construction which is expected to begin late spring or early summer.

Mark Kalina stated he observed standing water in the area. John Ianni identified water areas and felt thorough mapping was done. There are no plans to add more storm drains.

Jeffrey Pescosolido was concerned about the protection of the open ditches. John Ianni said many ditches along the road are conveyance systems.

Lynda Morhardt voiced concerns about the backup systems during power outages and requested the town be presented with an outline for an emergency outage plan. Mr. Moore assured Lynda that once the emergency plan is approved it will become a public document.

Janine Gelineau, 28 Anchorage Road, attended the meeting and voiced several concerns. Her questions were directed to Mr. Gaston, who responded as follows;

Q: Was new construction factored in with water removal?

A: New and future developments have been taken into account.

Q: Will grinding materials affect winter plowing and wetlands?

A: The roads will be covered with asphalt – will be improved.

Q: Homeowner's generator capacity for sewers during long power outages.

A: Sensory modules are installed to monitor systems.

Q: Where does the sewage back up if there is a problem?

A: There are 4 foot inlet pipes to the bottom of the ground installed to allow additional time.

Q: How will homeowners make contact if phone service is out or roads are blocked?

A: Service will be made available even without phone connections.

Q: Will blasting have to take place? Can blasting contaminate the water systems?

A: Blasting may not have to be done, however, if necessary pre-blasting surveys must be done as well as following drinking water quality guidelines.

Q: Many private roads are in the area – who will be responsible for them if there is a problem?

A: WPCA will be responsible for damages.
